

Feedback (Ami Patel):

This week we had one meeting. In it, we discussed about the progress done so far and I made sure that everyone received a feedback on the work they have done so far.

Feedbacks indicate the progress done so far. Through this, everyone gets to know that they are working in right direction or not and whether everyone is working towards the same goal and is in synchronization with other members or not.

Based on the feedbacks received, each one of us got an idea about the changes that were supposed to be made. Thus, through the feedback process we could find out where we lacked and improve on our codes and designs.

Also, everyone discussed various design patterns and explained reasons why they choose the specific pattern. Everyone gave feedbacks on how it could be implemented and how the code can be made more efficient.

Moreover, each member also demonstrated the weekly task assigned of making activity diagram, UI wireframes , user stories and use case specifications. Then feedbacks were given on the work done, necessary corrections were made and we could come up with the best design that represents our project.